Factsheet Swissalpine 2021

The Swissalpine Davos is the oldest Mountain-Ultramarathon in Switzerland. However, it is no longer just the races that are the main attraction. The point is to be part of the mountain-runner community that meets for the annual running event in the Alpine town of Davos. We call it «Swissalpine Spirit».

In the mid-1980s, Chur orienteer and engineer Andrea Tuffli had the idea of organising something special and unique in the Grisons. The outcome of this was the first Swissalpine Davos, held on 26th July 1986. At the time, the first long-distance route, 67 kilometres long and 2'400 metres of cumulative elevation gain, had to be conquered and was described as a «crazy challenge». To also make the Swissalpine accessible to not-so-crazy runners, there were, of course, shorter distances as well – which paid off. More and more runners took up the challenge and took part in the demanding, high-alpine mountain run.

From 2010 to 2019, an average of 4'700 participants took part in the unique high-alpine running spectacle each year. The routes across alpine meadows and mountain streams, over root paths in larch and fir forests to rocky single trails in the mountains make the Swissalpine a unique running event.

The Swissalpine offers runs for both elite and amateur athletes. Whether mountain runner or trail runner, there is a suitable run for everyone:

K68 – The supreme discipline (67.6 km | +/- 2606 m)

The trail leads through Dischma Valley, over the Scaletta and Sertig Pass, as well as the panoramic trail in between into Sertig Valley, and then over the Fanezfurgga to Monstein, and eventually back to the point of departure in Davos over Jatzmeder and Sfer Valley. A gem of a high-alpine route over four passes and through eight valleys!

The 35th Swissalpine in Davos passed the premiere of the new K68 with excellent results.

K43 – The Classic (42.7 km | +/- 1424 m)

The extremely popular mountain marathon is a classic. The trail leads through the charming valleys of Dischma and Sertig and over the former mule track over the Scaletta Pass and finally the Sertig Pass, where you descend past the beautiful Sertig Dörfli back to Davos.

K23 – The insider tip for connoisseurs (23.4 km | +629 m / -282 m)

The insider tip in the Swissalpine programme. It follows the earlier traces of the Walsers. The trail leads through a wildly romantic gorge over the Wolfgang Pass and finally past the breath-taking Lake Davos. A run for connoisseurs.

K10 – An experience between the peaks (9.3 km | +/- 163 m)

This route is especially suitable for connoisseurs and supporters. The joint finish alongside world-class runners gives everyone a very unique feeling of happiness.

KIDS – For the biggest running stars (0.5 – 1.4km)

The kids traditionally start the main event. The mood is already terrific. With 500, 900, and 1'400 m runs, no kid is too small to be a running star!
